State Rests In Hall Trial

razor? A. Yes, I felt it was my duty.

Q. When did you give Mr. Simpson the razor? A. Three or four weeks ago.

His License Revoked

Q. Hasn't your license as a private detective been revoked? A. Yes, by your friend, Mr. Quinn.

Q. Mr. Quinn is the prosecutor of Hudson county, the man who sent you to prison? A. Yes, do you want me to tell you about him. I have plenty.

Simpson objected, with the contention that Quinn was not on trial. Caprio stumbled angrily from the stand as noon recess began.

After recess McCarter continued his cross examination of Caprio.

Q. How much money were you paid by Beckman for your three weeks service in the Hall-Mills case? A. $150 in cash at his office in this building.

Q. How many times during that time were you in his office in those three weeks? A. Several times.

Saw Him in Private

Q. Was anybody else in the office when you talked with him? A. I saw him in private.

McCarter asked that his further cross-examination be delayed while a piece of "physical evidence" be obtained.

McCarter had sent a private detective for Caprio's Rogues Gallery pictures.

"I will not present this razor," Simpson said. "There is some doubt as to whether this man's testimony is the truth."

Simpson was angry when he took his witness back.

"Take your finger out of your

Polite Hijackers Loot Estate of $40,000 Booze

BABYLON, L. I., Nov. 19.—Eight polite hijackers wearing handkerchiefs for masks drove up to the estate of the late J. Stanley Foster, president of the Bowery Savings Bank, during the storm last night, bound the caretaker, his wife and son to chairs in the parlor and worked three hours removing a private stock of pre-war liquors valued at more than $40,000.

mouth," he snapped, a few questions followed AND THEN CAME THE DENOUNCING OF HIS OWN WITNESS AND THE COLLAPSE OF THE RAZOR AS A LINK IN FASTENING THE MURDERS TO PERSONS HAVING ACCESS TO THE HALL HOME.

Simpson rested his case after a map of the murder scene was excluded.

Robert H. McCarter, chief defense counsel, immediately attacked the authenticity of the calling card found at Dr. Hall's feet. The state has contended that the bit of paste-board bears Willie Stevens's fingerprint.

After the jury had been removed he said:—

"I respectfully submit that evidence with reference to the fingerprints on 'S-17'—the calling card—be stricken out."

McCarter traced the card's history since the murder, and showed how it had been passed about among various investigators four years.

His motion was denied by Justice Parker.

4 Killed, Many Hurt By Blast on Vessel

BALTIMORE, Nov. 19 (By U. P.).—At least four men were killed and perhaps a score injured in an explosion aboard a ship in port at the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Company's plant at Sparrows Point today.

FIREMEN BATTLE BLAZE AS SCORES FLEE IN PANIC

Brooklyn firemen battled a stubborn blaze in an empty factory building at 146 Green St. today. Scores of workers in the neighborhood turned out on the streets as smoke spread to their buildings.

The GRAPHIC regrets that, owing to lack of space, it has been compelled to omit twenty columns of advertising from today's issue.

Capt. Charles Hartt, 53, sailing master for Foster, summoned to the door, stared into the muzzle of a revolver and was forced to stand as seven men filed past him into the house.

Surveying the family group in the parlor, the leader looked at Mrs. Hartt and said:—

Parlor Conversation

"We're sorry, captain, we wouldn't have come in if we'd known the lady was at home."

The leader then took a seat and holding his weapon in his lap, kept up a running conversation with the family. In between times he directed the removal of the liquor.

At midnight the last of the cases had been carried outside. Capt. Hartt, his wife and their son, John, were bound to their chairs.

"Good-night," said the leader. "We're sorry, but business is business."

THE RETURN OF PETER GRIMM

Posed by Janet Gaynor, Alec Francis, Richard Walling and an illustrious Cast

ADAPTED FROM THE FAMOUS BELASCO PLAY

Their castles in the air blasted by Peter's proclamation, Katie and Jimmie decide to take their future into their own hands. They are about to elope in Jimmie's flivver when Dr. McPherson stops them. Bringing them into the house, he says: "Peter has not long to live. If you elope, you will hasten his end."

Katie finally succumbs to the doctor's plea, and that evening Peter summons Frederick and Katie. "My days are numbered, I fear," he tells them. "But before I pass on I want to see you married to each other." Katie, in order to bring happiness to her beloved Peter during his last days, consents.

The next day the Bartholomews call. Learning of the proposed wedding and of Peter's decline, Mrs. Bartholomew chatters endlessly about the loss the world will suffer with Peter's death. Unknown to the older people, little William hears the conversation. Alarmed, he determines to find out what the talk of death means.

"You are not going to die, are you, Peter?" William pleads. Peter calms the boy's fears. He summons Frederick and Katie and insists that they be married within a days. Peter soon is overcome with the sleep from which there is no waking. (Concluded tomorrow.)
